What kind of water bowls to use and why	Stainless steel is non-porous, which means it won't hold onto bad bacteria, plus it is super easy to clean which keeps it sanitary for your pup. – and, not incidentally, also the safest bowl for your dog to eat and drink from – is stainless steel. This material will not leach potentially dangerous chemicals into your dog's food and water, like some plastics, aluminum, poorly glazed pottery, or old ceramic dishes	1- Lixit Quick Lock Stainless Steel Cage Bowl for Dogs, Silver, 10, 20, 40 Ounce (attaches to side of crate) 2-Pioneer Pet Stainless Steel Dog &amp; Cat Fountain Raindrop Design, 60-oz 3-Proselect Stainless Flat Sided Pail 1Qt ( hooks to side of crate) 4-Proselect Buster Bowls (rubber bottom, non-slip stainless steel)
Water	Filtered, and or bottled, non-tap water it's safer for your dog to drink filtered tap water over direct tap water. if you won't drink that water then don't give it to your dog either. - filtered water will reduce the high mineral content often present in tap water, which will help reduce staining.
Eye stains	Cleaning the stained area with warm water or saline solution can help remove them. Regular grooming and keeping the eye area dry are the best prevention methods.	-3

Play pen vs crate	Potty training: Appropriate-sized dog crates are recommended for potty training your puppy because of their limited space — a dog is not going to want to soil his own bed! A pen, by comparison, leaves more than enough room for a dog to relieve himself in one corner and play in another	1-IRIS 4-Panel Plastic Exercise Dog Playpen with Door  2- Tespo Pet Playpen, Portable  3-NATRKE Pet Playpen for Small Animals, Portable Plastic Translucent

	Emotional support: There s also an emotional benefit to using a crate. Dogs tend to have a natural affinity for enclosed spaces, or dens, where they know they re protected from everything outside. In the same way many people feel cozy and relaxed in bed, dogs enjoy having a safe space like a crate to retreat to. With a little training, this can easily become a favorite napping place for your pup as well — especially if you make her crate a little homier with a soft bed and even a cover. Is a playpen better than a crate? Ideally, neither the crate nor the playpen is better than the other — they just have different purposes. A crate should be your dog s designated space to relax and sleep (never a punishment!), while a playpen keeps her secure in a smaller area of your home. Potty Time	Transitional Training If your ultimate goal is to wean your pup from pee pads to full outdoor elimination, make a gradual transition. If your indoor bathroom area is located far away from a door, slowly move the pee pads closer to the door week by week. Do this until your pup reaches an age when he can be expected to hold his bladder	1-Pet Loo Indoor Yard Training System for Dogs, Small 2-Wee pads 3- https://www.akc.org/expert-advice/training/the-ins-and-outs-of-potty-pad-training/

	and bowels for several hours, or when an adult dog is in a regular habit of using his designated spots. Eventually you'll move the pee pad right next to the door, and then outside the door to his outdoor elimination spot. You can then be done with the pee pads.
